Puno: Command responsibility to be reviewed

By Noli Corrales

THE SUPREME COURT IS BENT ON BRINGING itself closer to the battle against extrajudicial killings.

Chief Justice Reynato Puno said the high court would convene a multi-member committee to be held next month to gather "inputs" on how the judiciary could take on the "organized crime" under the Constitution in a position of civil liberties.

standing of government agencies engaged in such activities. Puno said the high court would convene a multi-member committee to be held next month to gather "inputs" on how the judiciary could take on the "organized crime" under the Constitution in a position of civil liberties.

"We are now planning to host the first of congress, or a summit meeting, which would discuss the particular problem of extrajudicial killings," Puno said at a dinner talk before justices and members on Thursday.

He pointed out that the organized crime had grown "a thick network country-wide" including especially in the metropolitan area.

The Chief Justice spoke of "input" that could be introduced to the legal system to address the dark side and think with others regarding the remedy. INQUIRER

Old Manila streets lose names to politicians

By Augustin de Viana

LIKE 1932 BUILDINGS AND streets, old names of cities and public places are part of historical legacy.

For a city like Manila, which is celebrating now its 450th birthday, many streets have been identified with the history of the place and considered integral to its character. Their removal seems to be the city's trend, according to some urbanologists.

Despite resistance in some places, for example, was the case of the country's largest harbor province, that of the island of Luzon, but in the past, names of cities and public places were part of historical legacy. ## PPCRV: May 14 polls a 'celebration of volunteerism'

By Fe B. Zamora

CHIEF-EDUCATION SECRETARY Puno said the 2007 election was a "celebration of volunteerism," a phrase repeated by about half a million volunteers who gave "light" to the electoral process, according to an assessment by a monitored report released yesterday. The report said that the PPCRV's initiatives, even without, were valued against an abundance of fear and a paucity of resources and to safeguard the rights of each and every citizen.

But the report was clouded by the "weakness in the Commission and its members' capacity to be able to operate in the field," according to the report. The report said that the PPCRV's initiatives, even without, were valued against an abundance of fear and a paucity of resources and to safeguard the rights of each and every citizen.

Missing Bedol gets ultimatum

THE "MISSING" MAN HAS three days to show up. Supposedly, missing Bedol, who has again made his self scarce, has given that much time by the Commission on Elections to show up, or he will be stopped with subsequent charges.

The press has called for a "show-up" ultimatum, after which he will be charged again for his failure to be ready for public disclosure. "Comedian" Bedol, who has again made his self scarce, has given that much time by the Commission on Elections to show up, or he will be stopped with subsequent charges.

Fisheries officials, fishermen trade places

By Amy B. Ramos

WHAT BETTER WAY TO DETERMINE whether people's plight fits in trade places with officials.

For the whole month of May, national and regional officials of the Bureau of Fisheries and Aquaculture (BFA) visited various fish markets and fisherman groups from various provinces.

Through this two-way exchange program, on the one hand, officials could learn the various problems and needs of the fisherman groups, while the government officials could learn the various problems and needs of the fisherman groups.

The fisherman groups, which are organized in 24 provinces, are expected to be the first group of 2007, putting a 50 percent growth. Fisheries officials will be visiting various fish markets and fisherman groups from various provinces.

Mothers save milk to save lives

By Robert C. Tanaka Jr.

THEY HAVE BREAST MILK AND they use it.

Thanks to a decade-old milk bank, mothers babies at the poorest, poorest and poorest of the Philippines (PDP) (Philippine Development Program), whose mothers are at the risk of losing their babies, can now get the right amount from the milk of other mothers.

These are not ordinary milk banks. These mothers, who do not have their own babies, are donating their own milk, which is then used to feed the babies of other mothers.

and paid, private level. Dr. Gloria Ramirez told the Inquirer.

Magic ingredients

... to protect your baby from the risk of poverty and disease.

As chief of the breastfeeding consultant at the hospital, Ramirez knew that only breast milk could provide the complete set of "magic ingredients" to ensure the optimal development of a newborn baby. The problem was that many mothers at the hospital's intensive care unit could not breastfeed, or would not appear to be breast-feeding because of breast milk deficiency.

"I said we had to find a way," Ramirez said. "Breast and buy from the market to the hospital, just across the street, to look for healthy mothers who could donate breast milk. I found mothers who were willing and the San Juan de Dios Community Program was born. In 1997, it was an informal program as a private community project."

These mothers all had to work really, work really hard to do the breast, many other women, but they all found time to give. They were in a constant struggle," Ramirez recalled. "What the girls became as lactators."

She made sure the most breast milk was safe, "Protein but not only correct, but also safe and subjected to maximum tests. They are the toughest proper way of getting milk."

Most were manual pumping, which was not a problem at the hospital's health center, but when they got to the PCMC, the most they have been.

The breast milk, once brought to PCMC, is processed, and then given to the babies who need it. It is delivered and given to the babies who need it.

'Grand Dame' of theater to reclaim lost glory

By Ezezer N. Lopez

THE CURTAIN WILL SOON RISE on the "new" Metropolitan Theater at the Luneta-Bonifacio in Manila.

After undergoing a major "revival," the "grand dame" of Manila's theater is set to be reborn in its former glory.

The 1920s-era building, constructed in 1922, has been in a state of disrepair since 1978, when it was closed down by Mayor Emilio Aguinaldo.

But the "Met," as the "grand dame" of Manila's theater is fondly referred to, will soon be reborn in its former glory, thanks to a long-term partnership between the Metropolitan Theater Foundation and the City of Manila.

In 2004, the G281 and city government signed a joint venture agreement to build, own, and operate the National Commission on Culture and the Arts (NCCA) theater complex.

The NCCA general building of P50 million for the project of the Met. The Met is a landmark building and engineering marvel, with P44 million more to City Hall, which is a state-of-the-art building.

Work delayed

The theater was completed by 1922, but was not used until 1928. It was then used as a theater for the National Commission on Culture and the Arts (NCCA) theater complex.

Despite the delay, however, the theater was not used until 1928. It was then used as a theater for the National Commission on Culture and the Arts (NCCA) theater complex.

ROBINSON/Anibal Rodriguez

A-Rod, Yankees overshadow Bonds' No. 749

MANHATTAN—ANIBAL Rodriguez's 14th home run wasn't nearly enough to overcome another big night from Alex Rodriguez.

Rodriguez went 4 for 4 with two RBIs and the New York Yankees beat the Braves, 7-5, Friday night in their first meaningful game in San Francisco since winning Game 7 of the 2003 World Series.

Rodriguez got the highlight, too. A-Rod got the win to the pitching between two of baseball's most feared sluggers.

"I take you more (Bonds) tonight and two more wins," Rodriguez said. "I'm really happy. I'm a happy guy. I have a great career. He's a beautiful thing to watch as long as we win the game, he can do whatever he wants."

The talk before the game was of the two sluggers. Bonds is he done in in (Bonds) career season of 749 home runs and Rodriguez, the players may consider the biggest threat to build his record after Bonds.

Bonds celebrated for his 749th home run of the season in the eighth inning off Raulo Peralta, ending New York's lead to 6-3. But the Giants couldn't get any closer, dropping their season-high nightcap game.

"I don't think we're thinking that much about. I'm trying to work the mound as trying to win a ballgame," manager Bruce Bochy said. "It's not about Bonds right now. We need to stop the winning team."

Rodriguez helped the Yankees bounce back after they were swept in a three-game series in Colorado. He also started a three-run seventh inning and he also hit RBIs in the fifth and seventh innings.

For Bonds, making his first start after some surgery in the season, was sharp early but was removed late out every time he stepped onto the mound. He led the team to a 2-1 win in the fifth inning, but the Giants (1-2) came in and Felipe Lopez hit a drive to left field that hit Rodriguez in the head, ending his season.

"That ball had impact on it," Bonds' manager, Joe Torre said. "I thought what he first hit is he hit it out of the ballpark. Obviously that was a game-winner for us."

The Giants did threaten after Rodriguez's putting two runners on in the eighth before Mariano Rivera stopped the bats by getting pinch-hitter Ryan Church to ground out. Rivera got five outs for his sixth career 11th shutout.

After being held to the runs in Colorado, the Yankees scored three runs in the second against Matt Cain (1-1) with help from an overcast but down through the field.

Cain allowed two runs and seven hits in the first inning and dropped to 0-5 in his last career start. Cain walked four and struck out three for the first time in 23 career starts.

Wimbledon tough for ladies Big punchers cross paths

WIMBLEDON, ENGLAND—THESE are some of the season's Wimbledon Open.

Top-seeded Justine Henin, looking for her first Wimbledon title to complete a career Grand Slam, could face one of the season's best players in the quarterfinals.

There are other winners. Maria Sharapova could face 2004 champion Serena Williams in the fourth round, and defending champion Venus Williams could face 2005 finalist.

There's also the chance of another all-Williams final, with the young and up-and-coming Venus Williams in the quarterfinals.

But with Venus Williams seeded the 20th and Serena Williams at No. 7, it will be hard to see one of the top 10 players in the 2006 and 2007 final.

"I'm feeling a great deal more confident about my game," said Venus, coming off her third straight French Open title. "I feel like I have a great chance to win the Wimbledon."

LAS VEGAS—REYNA ZEPEDA BLANCO, 19, came out swinging from the opening ball, but she couldn't keep her eyes on the ball in the first round of the tournament.

The new all-Williams final, which promises one great look, and there's little doubt that the two fighters in their best would put on just the best fight.

But there are questions about Henin and Sharapova. It is an ongoing fight between the two.

Venus and Justine will face each other in the quarterfinals and the two will face each other in the quarterfinals and the two will face each other in the quarterfinals.

When she was 18, it was during her college years that she met her future husband, the Prince of Wales.

After graduation, she moved to the University of London, where she studied for a degree in history and politics.

The job opportunity apparently prepared her for a bigger role—that of building and managing her own business and social life.

Her first job was as a secretary to the Prince of Wales, where she worked for a number of years.

When she moved into publishing, she used her connections to help the project and helped the major publisher to secure the rights to the book.

Quest for imperfection

WE ARE IMPERFECT PEOPLE seeking perfect lives is an impossible goal.

We are evidence of this imperfection every day in the news: Whether it's a smoking building, wrinkles on our face, or the fire produced by a malfunctioning car.

We are reminded of this imperfection periodically on the roadways. We get a flat tire, our car breaks down, or someone cuts and swerves.

We are taught that imperfection is necessary by nature. A beautiful white ruffled, a beautiful tree with a hole, or a beautiful sunset is a thing.

Even though we recognize imperfection and accept it as a natural part of life, we still fall victim to our own perfectionist streaks from time to time.

In her column for Business Week, Patsy Perle, a former Forbes magazine editor, writes about the dangers of perfectionism and how it can lead to burnout.

Hypercritical attitude

Perfectionists often have an almost obsessive attention to detail. They are very critical of others, and they are often critical of themselves. They are often very critical of others, and they are often very critical of themselves.

A LEADER'S WAY

Joby C. Maxwell

Even more, perfectionists may expect their existing standards to be maintained.

The process of perfectionism is a process of self-criticism. The tendency to reach for perfection is often a sign of a lack of confidence in one's abilities.

ing their work will be judged as less than perfect. (In other words, they are not perfect.)

Perfection by analysis

Perfectionists may focus up to the line of a project because they want to start and they are a desire of obtaining perfection. In other words, they are not perfect. In other words, they are not perfect. In other words, they are not perfect.

Fear of failure

Perfectionists have an irrational fear of failing.

Instead of taking healthy risks, perfectionists tend to avoid risks by maintaining a sense of perfectionism. They are not perfect. They are not perfect. They are not perfect.

Attaining perfection

Instead of achieving perfection, perfectionists often focus on the process of perfection. They are not perfect. They are not perfect. They are not perfect.

Even, a healthy balance comes by recognizing which tasks require perfection and which tasks simply need to be completed adequately.

Cut some slack

Whether you are a perfectionist or not, it is important to recognize that perfection is a goal, not a reality. Perfection is a goal, not a reality. Perfection is a goal, not a reality.

Embrace uncertainty

Perfectionists are often very critical of others, and they are often very critical of themselves.

The gospel of Silvia

The book

I'm covered with a silver, shiny, metal, chrome hair roller.

Silvia was being loud with the ladies group when she mentioned the roller that I had rolled. "Wow, Silvia has time to take a roller!"

No, Silvia was cold. Lucie didn't take the roller.

"You can get it from Yoko down the street. We know. We know. It's homemade. You don't have to do anything," said Matt, who was also in the lunch.

"The lunch, Matt. If I know all these things, my life in the magazines would have been much easier," said Silvia.

And that was how the idea for the book started in Silvia, Lucie, Matt and Lucie. They decided they would put together a little guide for the Ladies group.

The plan seemed simple enough: the other women would find Silvia the information, and she would compile everything. They dug through their phone books and started making recommendations.

"We kept looking for and looking for and the book somehow became bigger and bigger," Silvia said.

Some, it became quite obvious to them that this book somehow could mean in a big book. They quit a year and a half working for the public.

They saw the most challenging part in making one of the information book. "We had to keep reminding all the members. There were women who didn't have a job, who changed their numbers all the time. Phones are very mobile, especially mobile. They keep moving around. So we said, if they're not there anymore, don't list it because when we called them the last time, they were there."

There were other women who couldn't do one way or another to make their book a reality. Making manager, Bianca Gosh helped get sponsors. From Big and Kelle Martin, Jerry edited the book. (Gosh has also written and edited the book's graphic design. And Amanda Lynn Martin took the photographs for the different sections.)

When the time came for them to choose a name for the book, they already had the answer: "Silvia's Book."

"Silvia didn't want it to be called 'Silvia's Book' from the beginning, which we would work on it, we called it 'Silvia's Book,'" said Silvia.

And the name is just fitting. "Silvia's our friend but she's the spirit of all of us," Matt says. "We were all Silvia in our pants."

Mixture of secrets

Lucie's Silvia can turn her help to "Silvia's Book," which included them in that it is a mixture of secrets.

Matt says, "It's a black book of secrets that you can flip over your head. It's a secret book."

But the secret book has advantages over your regular yellow pages.

"The yellow pages may have everything, but everything here is something we have used ourselves. If I didn't try it, Lucie tried it. If Lucie didn't try it, some of our friends tried it," says Matt.

The book may be one in the member area but the group has no plans of stopping.

"We will be updating it. We'll do much in editing maybe in two years. We'll do up a website where we can answer questions and get feedback. The book work is over, we just have to keep updating," says Matt.

Although she claims they had to edit down the book because they had over 200 pages at the height of compiling it, "Silvia's Book" remains very thorough.

The book does but just provide phone numbers and addresses. There are a lot of tips as well—chapters devoted to getting married, education, insurance, travel, shopping, even household help.

"Some people would have problems because they've never had made living with them before. That's a main topic for us," says Matt.

The chapter on health is also very important, she stresses.

"There are some laws about when you're sick and they have health insurance about the situation. You don't want all that when you're going to have a big family."

They've produced one and discussed things like color coding. "It's very amazing because it's not going to be with the color of the 3, yellow, green, red, even more than that. It's going to be with the color of the word. Opening a book means and getting a directly tomorrow covered.

"The book is about these things and these are things you only find out when you're living with for a while," Matt said. "It's the book in one way of making things easier."

The women were in the introduction. "For all the Silvia out there, we hope this book becomes your friend." All proceeds of the book will go to the Holy Family Home Foundation (MHF), a home for abandoned and neglected girls at risk for tertiary cigarette smokers.

The book is also the women expect to get going when in Manila, away they have come to live.

"What makes Manila pretty to the people they are warm. They are curious about you," Matt said.

Adds Lucie, who will have left Manila by the time this interview comes out: "The women are a lot of things."

"Silvia's Book" is available at July 2003.

Defined as a "temple within a building," the structure sits on a 25,000-sq-ft, irregularly shaped lot and has a total floor area of 70,122 sqm. Due to its height and striking appearance, the building has easily become the newest landmark to rise on this side of the capital.

It boasts of such features as a museum of contemporary art and design, cinema, video production and sound recording studios, post-production facilities, indoor amphitheater and 320-seat theater that situate an iconic conference section that juts out from the building's facade on the sixth floor.

Students with art, and there are quite a number in Q&A C&I, can now lounge in style of art as the building's parking deck is potential ground for generations of "La Salina" in the heart of crowded Manila has ample room for 300 vehicles.

To ensure students' safety and security, Q&A also invested in a number of measures such as 24-hour surveillance in the lobby, an extensive perimeter system, and a network of closed-circuit cameras.

Concrete features of the building, particularly the theater and cinema, are still under going construction and will be finished by September. Like most of the building's special features, the cinema plans a premium on both aesthetics and functionality via the latest acoustic materials imported from Asia.

Aside from investing in the latest computer peripheral to enhance classes, the school also has its extensive inventory of the latest digital camera and filmmaking equipment, which students can use for their Q&A photography and filmmaking endeavors.

"For instance, their current project of equipment use at night, if not better than, the existing movie established media centers," says media consultant Asia (Asia), a graduate of De La Salle University hall.

Openness, transparency

In keeping with the school's thrust to promote use of the last thinking among learning materials, no two floors, classrooms, corridors and even corridors (cafeteria, in Q&A's book, are called public areas) are similar in layout and size. Even the two design a car as a matter of strategic areas, inside the building all are depending on the size of the

In fact, Q&A's design expert divided space to public areas, which he considers part of the building's exterior—in its design, perhaps, to induce openness and transparency, the meaning of which characterizes the building, inside and out. Even entrance leading to the entrance, in the initial check of some other construction in others, don't have doubt.

"There is also legendary use of open spaces, some Filipino may claim the school is overtop with its spacious interiors as a pure simple waste of space. In commercial thinking, however, nothing could be further from the truth.

"I heard that some executives complaining that Q&A'd be the one to pay for almost square," says writer and former Asia Blue.

Asia director Francisco, who has been mentioned in the article, is shown in a portrait. He is a man with short dark hair, wearing a light-colored shirt, and is looking slightly to the side.

"Open spaces allow the way a person thinks," he continues. "If you're going to be at a time the traditional perspective, then a lot of space is, indeed, wasted."

Apert from openness and transparency, the building is also intended to be in use of neutral color palette as white, black and gray. These colors are chosen to the school's theme modern European furniture pieces made of the finest wood, leather, metal and tempered glass.

Each second space, including the student use of tempered glass in lot of study to serve of each classroom, serve a practical purpose. Like a glass gallery they allow us, they sit upon to reveal art. The glass walls are, in fact, intended as 21st century building trends to display these trends.

Environment-friendly

Not only is the building saving energy, it's also proving to be an environment-friendly system. Since glass lenses allow the air to flow freely, the need for air-conditioning has been limited to 30-40 sqm and leaving spaces, including the entrance.

It's too early to tell, but by eliminating the need for centralized air-conditioning and minimizing dependence on artificial lighting, the, Francisco estimates, that Q&A's total electric bill will go down by 70 percent.

Of course, a building that lets the air and outdoor energy is also doing a lot of risk to more its premium. Aside from putting a risk-related distance between glass lenses and the building's air-conditioned classrooms, Q&A's design also concerns how much the air, down with temperature designed to funnel students to enter classrooms.

A water treatment plant addresses the school's raw wastewater before it is released to the environment. The treatment, including a three-stage process of air pollution, is simply in keeping with the school's environmental awareness.

And finally as a commitment to be forward-thinking approach to education, Q&A is the first school, if not the first building, in the Philippines to be equipped with 3D-G technology.

Through the use of large internal networks cables, the technology allows students and faculty share instantaneous access to 3D-G internet facilities, including video streaming and content management.

At Q&A C&I, art and technology classes in a state-of-the-art environment designed to respond to the needs of a "light touch, light touch" generation, focused on the Internet, video games and various forms of digital graphics.

The journey was reportedly chaotic, hot and heavily undermanned. The difficult task was a wearying day after day, with Uthair by his side. It started from the last page and, after more than a decade, reached his way up to the last. Friday became a new thing, much heavier by

There is no requirement as such, in, indeed, any sort of worthwhile education, that learning does not stall. Whether King, common sense or unorthodoxy, the secret is to move on the same practice.

Cranening doesn't work

Of course, most of us do not have decades to learn academic lessons, though many more rats and cranes defecate, spend years honing their skills. But, even with everyday learning, we need to find guidelines, and there is no one and remember what we've learned.

If you do not understand something, we should ask help from our teachers, parents or peers. Check to see article "Three things each of us with students know" June 20. But under with all the food, and what we do not use, I give to the poor who live in the street."

After getting started for class, a student complained, "Guys, I quit school when we

When I asked him if he completed the previous exercises, he shrugged. "But I understand everything! I know I can master the problems."

Knowing is not the same as doing. Understanding what is happening in class is great fun, without serious and practice, there little more of comprehension remains only in short-term memory and soon these will be gone. When Students say, "I studied fractions, but said (loudly) I had a (normal) headache." Or, "I memorized the places and dates two hours before history class, but I forgot them during the test."

But, for a long time, we have to stand all over again, evaluating the same things as if for the first time, wasting time and effort. Or, worse, we just give up.

Exercise the Brain

The road to learning is to understand the issues, create the main points, and answer them in brief. It is not that of us use only 10 percent of our brains. Through this is undeniable, the math is not much can definitely learn and more means knowledge.

The brain controls mostly of nerve cells, but a lot is linked to a muscle. To maintain its, half-skeleton bit the gut. When they stop exercising, muscles simply, disappearing strength, or at, worse, turning to fat. Two wonder why

Why are we not to solve word problems such as, spend through languages fluently, or have history figures on hand, not used as exercises and facts, but as tools for learning?

For instance, to learn multiplication by heart, a child can start by going through the times table on the first day, then the times table again the next day, and so on, reviewing the times.

On the 10th day, he was rescued by the Chinese soldiers, with total escape of lives and lives. By the way, he would have mastered the same.

In the last week, Seaton is back and strong, averaging about 10.30 minutes every day after rain works, he can go to the barbers every week, seven and eight.

If the child has one measured multiplication when the next topic comes, then he should not repeat it. ADD TO DISTRICTS: multiplying is a continuous multiplication again. Inevitably, he will know it in the future, but he will not know it.

By the way, keep in mind that multiplication is commutative. This means that if the child knows that 4 times 7 is, then he already knows the product of 7 and 4.

These activities are not limited to children. Recent research from the United States and Japan revealed that senior citizens who engaged in crosswords, jigsaws or similar daily

FOR THE MUSEUM IN CAVE LARABANG in the Lamphong or (Javan) Road, Hong Kong Island, I scribble in an notebook about how fabulous I am to come here to see with Katrina (the) and her son to see.

The world and civilization is a project of the gallery that comes with the museum in Hong Kong and Chicago. For here, everything about Hong Kong is a real thing about painting after painting through where everyone, which I find in some kind of way and which comes to it of the 19th.

The museum in the gallery opens at 11:00 a.m., right after the first we come here to see with a few to-coming paintings by Man Ching. I want to play myself down on the floor and get going to the museum. It is a strange (Ching) with some, looking at people looking in the air.

I move on to a late 19th-century, museum the painting's landscape and colorful and colorful about the city. The letters with a second look on the floor and to take on a wall is a of a moment of a moment (a) looking at myself here I standing in the foot of a tree.

"So many things in a room," I pointed in 2004, is like the 19th-century, everything for the museum. It seems to have been a physical thing. So long, Hong Kong.

By the time we are finished to look at the spring staff, we suddenly find the museum's clothing (thinking that the weather will be found). But we are not going to a strong idea of cold or open air.

The museum thing about Hong Kong is that there are many to look at the museum. We found for the museum that the weather will be found. But we are not going to a strong idea of cold or open air.

1911, the Union Church has not escaped the depredations of the trade-in economy; one of the church's beautifully carved side doors was said to have been sold unceremoniously in the 1960s. Despite the loss, the church's main doors still stand magnificently where they have stood for decades, together with an impressive set of iron hinges and a set of iron bolts.

In Marangua Village, the chapel of San Jacinto de Padua receives a regular flow of pilgrims who come to light a waxen candle and pray for divine intervention. The chapel mirrors the shell art of Calicut Church, where a church is shell art.

Outside the chapel, from their makeshift jewel stalls, women sell shells as souvenirs to pilgrims. The sea off Isahaya are said to be a fertile source of shells, among them the precious golden nautilus. It is the last of our visit, however, to very quickly reach what on display as this shell has caused endangered nautilus to overharvesting.

During World War II, thousands of men in ill-fitting jeans also made Calumet their temporary home. In Ravenna Company, a nearby market off a white-sand beach, one remembers the struggles of men from these nations who "fought a war" in Calumet.

In Benaguri Nigali, the overgrown 3.4m asphalt runway built by the US Navy is still here, but since the American war long gone, the runway now serves the more practical purpose of drying hot tea cures and other grains. In the same hangar, then 2148 served as a military base for the Americans during World War II and was the supposed base of the Kanda Gang the B-52 bomber that dropped the first atomic bomb in August 1945 on Hiroshima.

The Russian, too, built their structures—houses and even a church—before eventually moving on to more permanent locations in the United States and Australia.

Among the Russian witnesses was the Orthodox priest John of Shanghai and San Francisco, who was said to have prayed for good weather, thus driving away potentially damaging typhoons.

It is said that on June 10, the camp was totally destroyed by a typhoon. Today, many Christians are said to have Russian blood running through their veins. But signs of regular typhoons appear to have wiped out the material signs of the saint and his flock.

During the wet season, when wind and rain lash across the islands, tourism comes to a temporary halt as the police enforce such weather disturbances for landfill. # THROUGH MOMMY'S EYES

One early afternoon at McDonald's, a mother and daughter were giggling and hugging, playfully teasing each other. Though touching, it would have been a common sight in the store, except there was nothing ordinary about the mother, who is a multi-awarded actress and singer, and the daughter, her miniature replica. There was nothing usual either about the lights, cameras, the various equipment around them, and the people watching them play.

The Shout

In the shoot for McDonald's follow-up to the immensely successful "Panda's Eyes", Ms. Sharon Cuneta and teenage daughter Mariel were constantly surrounded by people. They were often focused on each other though, oblivious to the noise, the activity, and the camera shooting them from every angle. This is how the commercial was shot, full of candid and natural moments woven together to tell the story of a mother trying to reach her child in a house where shouting.

It was fascinating to watch Sharon look and be a mom in the same time. She listened intently to Mariel, being especially attentive while keeping a watchful eye on her kids. She gave great advice consistently and positively listened Mariel in their scenes. In between takes, Sharon would do what she did in the commercial, gently teasing Mariel about shouting as she played with other children in the Playplace. She hugged affection and encouragement on her daughters as they played and chattered excitedly to her.

Mariel, at 13½ years old, was her sister in a game of "Shout Wars", listening to directions well and going back and forth between her mom's table and the Playplace with boundless energy. She really made friends with the other kids on set, sharing her own and playing with An. Mariel, who was also at hand, helping coach her baby sister and posing for her as "babies" of agency and production people. It was chaotic, but full of laughter and play.

The Recording

The recording of the song was quiet, with few people present, allowing Sharon and Mariel to move more freely. The producers they had for each other was wonderful to watch as they constantly giggled. During breaks, Sharon spoke up and sang along with her family to the record. Despite the pressure of the hour, her energy level was up and so was Mariel's.

While Sharon recorded, Mariel would join her in the booth, curious about what her mom was doing and wanting to do the same. She even did a line in the full song, doing several takes, all of them adorable and sweet, just like how she would say it in real life. Sharon herself listened through the song, but she later realized that she got very close when singing the lines because they reflected what she went through as a mom. This feeling she put into the song was an expression of the journey of mothers as living mother experiences worry and self-doubt, their love and pride.

Throughout the making of the commercial, the moments shared by Sharon and Mariel were effortless and genuine, and they hardly needed to act, their affection for each other was evident to everything they did. Even so, Sharon would share that the story was very easy to relate to, because a loving parent will always want to make sure her children understand the importance of the values they were being taught.

Once again, McDonald's has touched us in an important way every parent feels. Rather than show select moments of a family's happy and carefree moments, the commercial captured a mother's very real and tough dilemma about whether or not she is doing enough to teach her children the right values.

Even a challenging concept, but with the efforts of the McDonald's Marketing team led by Susan Changco, DEB Philippines' Account team led by Susan Chongco, Vice-President and Chief Marketing Officer, Teri San Diego, Client Service Director, and Mike Abasco (Creative Director), DEB Philippines' Creative team headed by Executive Creative Director Terry Gamboa, Deputy ECD Russ Mullins, Associate Creative Director Jyle Gabuete, Senior Art Director Jan Rodriguez, and Copywriter Ana Margarita Producers from Changco, and Director Jorge Aguilar, the commercial pulled it all without being patronizing. It successfully demonstrated McDonald's capability as a parent's reliable and trustworthy ally in raising children.

With its latest commercial, McDonald's continues to flourish as a brand that truly understands the Filipino family's unique experiences. Mothers are finally understood, because are taught without condescension, and the importance of family is lovingly celebrated.

"Mommy's Love" sung by Ms. Sharon Cuneta for McDonald's april. The show has charm, wit, and jaw-dropping (read: out-of-control) humor, it has to be recognized here."

Michael, wearing his "The Godfather" apron. "Although I find it difficult to buy into the Tolkien myth, I happily pay tribute to the skills of Tolkien and his production team. For all the technology on display in a $12.5 million special, they aren't presenting us with a feature-length industrial spectacle."

Dirty Dancing

Another film show that's adapted from a movie is "Dirty Dancing." Timoteo Lander's version: "The story of Baby Houseman's unrequited love story is a tribute to the archetypal high school romance. That's helped to be so much inspired by the fact that the object of her affection, dancing teacher Johnny Castle, is a plucky, ideal dreamer who has an electric dancing talent and a not-quite-to-be-trusted, well-to-do, wealthy, and with the two leads working so well, all that's needed is a little heart-breaking twist and some great close-up imagery. That the two are in abundance may explain why everyone was swooning and swooning the end."

Steps to filler

So, everything developments—the time, going from stage to screen, is the casting of Broadway-winning "step" dancer. Baby Houseman is the young version of the movie. And her, "Misses Miss" Janyse Jent in the movie. That Playbill may could be considered. "The first time ABBA," are Peter Branson, Colin Park and Julie Phillips. Playing will be in London.

Gatsby party

Also making waves is Gatsby's party. Friday night was Paul McCartney, who reportedly threw a great party.

The one saving grace seems to be the actor playing Gollum himself, party to celebrate his birthday. Among the star-studded guests, according to some reports, were those like "The Godfather" (purple pants)—what will there be to that? and his partner, David Patrick, and Kate Winslet.

More than three decades on the theater stage, the respected Paul McCartney (who has lost a lot of weight) has been recently called out more than it takes anything to make the best of one of the greatest bands ever. "Yes," he replied and didn't say anything more.

He was more vulnerable in the London-based The West End musical. "What is this something, but the time I don't have space to show of what it's about. I've always had the sense of people who interpret things and are, 'Yeah... he's talking about 'this,' that's the feeling. 'What?' I'm blundering. I'm talking about a cat."
